

Information on loan programs and resources available from SBA and other federal agencies

WASHINGTON -U.S. Rep. Harry Mitchell will host a workshop to help small business owners find information available to them on loan programs, tax incentives and other resources on Saturday, October 3, at Scottsdale Community College.

"Small businesses play a critical role in growing the economy and creating new jobs," Mitchell said. "There are a wide variety of tools and resources available for small businesses, but often small business owners don't know where or how to access them. This workshop will help link entrepreneurs with key resources to help start, grow and expand their small business."

The workshop, provided free of charge, will feature presentations from the Small Business Administration (SBA), Internal Revenue Service (IRS), and other organizations and lenders will have representatives on hand to answer questions.

For more information on the workshop, contact Mitchell's office at 480-946-2411.
